

To Whom it May Concern – TW Property Services

We acted as designers and project managers on an extensive refurbishment of the conferencing facilities at the Brooklands Museum located on this historic site near Weybridge.

TW Property Services were recommended for the tender list by the clients as they had previously successfully refurbished the Sunbeam Restaurant at Brooklands.

After submitting a detailed and diligent tender, TW were appointed as the fitting out contractor. A major consideration on this project was that the museum could only make certain areas available for short periods of time as they have a very full diary of events and bookings stretching through the year.

TW Property Services rose to this difficult challenge, to work around the Museum's existing bookings, taking over areas and quickly turning them around and back into use. No dates or Targets were missed in spite of additional works being absorbed into the contract.

We were very happy with the quality of the work carried out by TW and their sub-contractors. The old Brooklands buildings are difficult to work in being a combination of early 1900s to 1970s construction, with listed building elements. However, in many instances the remedial work and finishes carried out by TW were better than we had thought possible.

Over many years working in the construction industry we have experienced many different types of contractor. TW were probably the most user-friendly we have worked with, perhaps because the directors, Hamish Tavendale and Rupert Woollacott are constantly onsite. The project manager's supervision roll is made more easy.

It is with pleasure that we can say that we will be happy to work with them again and can give them the strongest of recommendations.
